

WE'RE SO PROUD!

The Utah Society for Environmental Education (USEE) recently awarded the 2006 Environmental Education Awards at their 10th Annual Benefit Bash & Awards Banquet. Shea Wickelson, our dedicated City Academy science teacher, received the Vern A. Fridley Environmental Educator of the Year Award. Staci Strenkert, Director of Programs and Professional Services for the USEE, reported that, "Shea was one of the most popular presenters at our USEE Conference in November with her "Making Every Science Environmental Science" presentation. She received rave reviews and the conference participants were all very impressed with both Shea and her students. You are lucky to have such a dedicated, enthusiastic and creative educator at your school." We are indeed lucky, and we all know how deserving Shea is of this recognition.
